New Materials

and the tempo indicates "adagio, rubato, impro feel." The euphonium begins the second movement muted, and the range is in the lower part of the staff. If the soloist provides some slides between wide leaps at the proper moment, the resulting affect is quite satisfying. The third movement begins with a short, somewhat improvised piano solo before a samba ensues. The tempo is marked 152, and a high level of technique and rhythmic precision is required from both the soloist and accompanist. The range in the euphonium tops out at f² and lies above the staff for most of the movement. The vertical sonorities in all three movements are quite carefully planned out.

The edition sent for review included the piano score and both treble and bass clef parts for the euphonium. An edition for trumpet is also available. The manuscript has been laid out with a computer and is quite legible. However, there are a few discrepancies between the solo part and piano score in the second movement. This work is a spectacular addition to the solo euphonium and piano repertoire and is designed for the advanced player.

> ~ Ken Drobnak Del Mar College

Tuba

Doodles: five variations for solo tuba by Keith Kirchoff. Available through KSK Publications, 22 Eldridge Rd. Jamaica Plain, Mass. 02130. (857) 928-3186; keithkirchoff@gmail.com; keithkirchoff.com. 2006. 4'. $6.

There are several ways and pricing options for tubists wishing to acquire this innovative new work. The basic price is $6.00 per score and $5.00 shipping per order per address. Multiple scores to the same address would only be charged one shipping fee. The composer is also willing to email a .pdf file free of charge

Before receiving a review copy of this work, I had actually looked at the .pdf file and mentally walked myself through the part. Now I will vouch that the "beautifully printed and bound on heavy stock paper" (with protective plastic cover) score is well worth the cost plus shipping. The inscription is: "for Jeffrey Meyer," a tubist from the Eastman School, and this is most definitely a college or professional level work. The solo ranges from FF to g-flat', and the notes are the least of the performer's worries (till the last movement).

ITEA Journal

Vol. 34 Number 4

The first movement is to be played ponderously with no inflection or dynamic change. In a test reading it began to sound like "that tone-deaf kid" who was always in the front row of choir singing blithely along while never finding the correct pitch. Movement two is a series of "cells" with directions for performance order, or disorder as the case may be! This is reminiscent of the fragmented solo works of the mid-70s where we learned how to treat freedom within a framework. It would be interesting to pass this movement around the class because no two readings would be alike. The third section showcases movement, "acting," whistling and beating time while never actually playing a note. In movement four, the tubist accompanies an imaginary soloist in a witty oom-pah pattern. Hopefully by this time the audience will be sympathetically "hearing the tune" that is not being played.

The last movement, which is to be played "faster than possible, always maintaining a perfectly steady tempo," is 40 measures alternating between 8/8 and 6/8 meters with constant eighth notes and chromatics galore. This could be quite a mess if played according to instructions. (But it really does look like fun). My next recital is scheduled for October 30, 2007. The day before Halloween should be a most proper time to unveil this!

~ Phillip C. Black Wichita State University, Wichita Symphony

Little Suite No. 3 for Solo Tuba by Barton Cummings. Brassworks 4 Publishing, 461 Sunrise Pkwy, Farmington, N.M. 87401. http://www.brassworks4.com/. Catalogue #BW428. 2006. 5:00. $10.

Along with many others, I have reviewed the music of Barton Cummings on numerous occasions, so I will spare the biographical details. Suffice to say that Mr. Cummings has extensive experience with our genre and is quite the prolific composer and arranger. With that out of the way, let's get to the work at hand.

The Little Suite No. 3 is exactly as it claims, a short suite of four movements for unaccompanied tuba. The titles of the individual movements give a good

Summer 200

description of the flavor of each move ment: "Dance," "Waltz," "Meditation and "Galop Off." The suite has a distiethnic tinge, from the Celtic skipping the "Dance" to the Czech "Galop." T majority of the range is from GG-flat g-flat¹ with one passage descending to CC. The work lies well on bass tuba l is definitely playable on contrabass tu

Summer 2007

The work does have a good amour offer to an audience. The movements relatively short, and the bookends are lively and energetic. From a performin standpoint "Meditation" offers a lot o flexibility and opportunity for the arti The technical challenges are minimal making this an ideal short filler piece a recital.

> ~ Tin Bowling Green State Univ

Eleven Etudes of "E" xpression for solo by Allen Molineux. Imagine Music, P. Box 15, Medina, N.Y. 14103. (716) 5. 0846; www.imaginemusicpublishing.cc Catalog number SMS061. 2007. $12.

Composer Allen Molineux holds degrees in music composition from DePauw University, the Eastman Scho of Music, and Florida State University Along with teaching theory and comp sition, he is currently the Music Depa ment Chair at Claflin University. His works have been performed worldwide including recordings by the Annapolis Brass Quintet, Tower Brass Quintet, a flutist Grzegorz Olkiewicz.

Eleven Etudes of "E" xpression is a se studies designed for use as both pedagos tools and as solo recital material. Each the etudes is given a name beginning "E" that defines the movements charac istic: "Envy," "Enthusiasm," "Enticeme "Eeriness," "Enchantment," "Earnestn "Exuberance," "Emptiness," "Elegance "Evanescence," and "Esotericism." The overall range of the set is from EE to b-flat, with the tessitura lying well on contrabass tuba but also providing amy challenges for bass tuba. The compose also includes performance notes giving brief overviews of the etudes and suggestions for recital performance.

Upon first glance it is evident that these are not your standard Bordogni/ Blazevich etudes. Dr. Molineux throws numerous curve balls at the performer.

28